When Blake and Shelby Gunner are hired to find a stolen fishing boat, they never expect it will turn into a murder investigation. But after Jack's dog, Arthur, discovers a stranger's body in the water not far from the bed & breakfast, the Gunners are pulled in to solve the case. Discovering the man's identity and why he was in town leads to a murky past with connections to a number of upstanding Port Scuttlebutt citizens. Can Blake and Shelby stop a killer before someone else is pulled beneath the waves of madness? See what others are saying about Double Barrel Mysteries: "Once again author Barbara Ellen Brink serves us a mystery that satisfies right up to the last words. There's a new murder in Port Scuttlebutt. Familiar characters, a few new ones, perfectly timed clues, and carefully guarded secrets keep Blake and Shelby Gunner busy and readers guessing." Joy DeKok author of De'Ja Brewed "Mystery, suspense, and excitement combines with heartwarming emotions and humor to make Midsummer Madness another thrilling addition to the Double Barrel Mysteries. Blake and Shelby are a perfect detective pair and their "support staff" - aka friends Alice and Tucker, as well as Alice's father and Blake's grandfather - are superb compliments. Add another cast of authentic small-town folks and situations and the stage is set for an entirely enjoyable novel." Tammy Doherty, author of She's Mine "I've enjoyed each of the Double Barrel mysteries with their engaging stories and entertaining characters. Assessment in Perspective May 30 2020 Assessment is an integral part of instruction. For the past decade, the focus on assessment—particularly via high-stakes mandated tests—has shifted away from the classroom and left teachers feeling like they are drowning in data. Assessment is, and needs to be again, much more than a number. Assessment in Perspective is about moving beyond the numbers and using assessment to find the stories they tell. This book helps teachers sort through the myriad of available assessments and use each to understand different facets of their readers. It discusses how to use a range of assessment types—from reading conference notes and student work to running records and state tests—together to uncover the strengths and weaknesses of a reader. The authors share a framework for thinking about the purpose, method, and types of different assessments. They also address the questions they ask when choosing or analyzing assessments: • What type of tool do we need: diagnostic, formative, or summative; formal or informal; quantitative or qualitative? • How do we use multiple assessments together to provide an in-depth picture of a reader? • When and how are we giving the assessment? • Do we want to be able to compare our readers to a standard score, or do we need to diagnose a reader's needs? • Which area of reading does this tool assess? • How can we use the information from assessments to inform our instruction? • What information does a particular assessment tell us, and what doesn't it tell us? • What additional information do we need about a reader to understand his or her learning needs? The book emphasizes the importance of triangulating data by using varied sources, both formal and informal, and across multiple intervals. It explains the power of looking at different types of assessments side-by-side with displays to find patterns or inconsistencies. What's more, students are included as valuable sources of data. Letting students in on the process of assessment is key to helping them set goals, monitor their own progress, and celebrate growth. When assessment is viewed in this way, instruction can meet high standards and still be developmentally appropriate.

Gunner's plans to renovate the murder comes calling...

Autumn in Port Scuttlebutt usually means a stormy Lake Superior, crisp temperatures, vibrant fall colors, and an invasion of deer hunters. This year, there's also a shallow grave. Someone killed Pete Dugan's ex-wife and planted her under his woodpile. The police consider him the obvious suspect, but the Gunner's have other ideas. What does the Shelby have to decipher the with murder.
